White Rabbit Stained Glass is a product of a hobby gone wild. It probably got its start, many years ago in Europe when Marilyn spent some time visiting churches and taking pictures of "Rose Windows". The colors were always so brilliant.

Finally in the 1990's, Marilyn was talked into taking a stained glass class. She then took another, then another and another. She then started teaching the classes herself. Richard got lonely and he decided he wanted to learn also. His first project was a Duck Panel. Marilyn got her teacher certification with Vicki Payne from PBS fame and both of us are still learning about glass.

We specialize in custom work creating panels, window inserts, cabinet inserts, lampshades, suncatchers and anything you can imagine. We also repair leaded windows if they can be removed and brought to our workshop.

Craft shows are also a means of seeing our work. We do at least 12 shows a year. We also have some items in retail gift shops.

To us stained glass is a labor of love. Since we both are retired, we enjoy being busy working with glass and its many colors and textures. You are only limited by your imagination.
